Communication Friendly Award - Primary Schools

The judges are looking for outstanding settings who prioritise language and communication and aim for all their children to be good talkers (and listeners).

Within your application, tell us what you do to achieve at least four of the following qualities we want to celebrate:

- How children's language and communication is valued and encouraged within your school
- How aware you are of potential speech, language and communication needs and what is in place to make sure children with speech, language and communication needs are spotted early
- Innovative ways you have found to engage and work with parents to support speech, language and communication
- Who else you work with to support children's speech, language and communication development and how this enhances the children's development
- What you do to make sure children with SLCN and those learning English as an additional language can take part, learn and develop in your school
- The impact on your practice and on the children of any training you and / or your staff have been involved in
- Any exciting or innovative practice in your school which has made a difference in supporting children's speech, language and communication

Good luck!

Hello - welcome to the 2011 National Year of Communication

Hello* - the 2011 National Year of Communication

In the UK today, over 1 million children and young people have some form of speech, language and communication need. This can affect them severely and for life. In areas of poverty, over 50% of children start school with delayed language skills. This puts them at a huge disadvantage to their peers as they struggle to learn and make friends.

Hello is the national year of communication – a campaign to increase understanding of how important it is for children and young people to develop good communication skills. The campaign is run by The Communication Trust, a coalition of over 35 leading voluntary sector organisations; in partnership with Jean Gross, the Government's Communication Champion.

The campaign seeks to support you wherever you are – in your school, nursery, health centre, parent and baby group or local authority – to help improve the communication skills of children and young people in your area so that they can fulfil their potential..

Hello aims to make communication for all children and young people a priority in homes and schools across the UK so that they can live life to the full. BT and Pearson Assessment are sponsoring Hello and the campaign is backed by the Department for Education and the Department of Health.

Visit www.hello.org.uk to get involved, order free materials and to sign up for regular updates.
