SPOTLIGHT ON HALIFAX SCHOOL AT SHINE A LIGHT AWARDS FOR ITS DEDICATION TO PUPILS' COMMUNICATION

Holy Trinity Primary School, a Church of England Academy in Halifax, Yorkshire has been awarded the Communication Commitment Award at a glittering award ceremony in London, hosted by comedian David Baddiel, for its dedication and commitment to staff, children and the local community around supporting children and young people's speech, language and communication development.

The 2015 Shine a Light Awards are a national awards scheme organised by Pearson, in partnership with The Communication Trust, to celebrate innovative work, inspirational individuals and excellent practice in supporting children and young people's communication development.

Holy Trinity School introduced The Communication Commitment – an initiative run by The Communication Trust – in September 2013 and have since run whole-school training days and staff meetings dedicated to supporting pupils with speech, language and communication needs (SLCN), organised parent workshops and held coffee mornings with a SLCN focus.

In addition, the school has introduced memorable experiences for pupils such as more schools visits, baking lessons in all classes and inviting storytellers, poets and musicians into class to help develop and increase children's vocabulary supporting them to become confident speakers and writers. The school has even developed its community links to include frequent visits to a local nursing home where the children join in activities with residents.

The school has made the Communication Commitment part of the school development plan, with all teachers, including teaching assistants, having had Communication Commitment as a target for their performance management.

Teachers have implemented top tips for communication in their classes and visual timetables are available across the school. Parents are supported and empowered to support their children and are encouraged to speak to other parents. Pupils across the school, including those with special educational needs (SEN) and communication difficulties, are becoming more confident in speaking, with the memorable experiences enabling them to develop their vocabulary and social skills.

Liz Whetham, Headteacher from Holy Trinity CoE Academy said: "We are delighted to have won the Communication Commitment Award at the 2015 Shine a Light Awards for our work in supporting children and young people with their communication and language development. Our school motto is 'lighting the way to a better future' and this award shows how as a school we are working towards that.

“The school is passionate about its work with communication and language development and are proud to have a Specialist Leader of Education, Anne Webster, delivering training at a universal level; through the Teamworks Teaching School Alliance, the LA and Huddersfield University. There are current negotiations to deliver the level 3 City and Guilds award in language development.

“Winning awards such as this will raise the profile of the importance of early language development and the impact that it has on children’s outcomes and life chances. “

David Baddiel, Host of the 2015 Shine a Light Awards, said: “Because of the important work that the Shine a Light 2015 winners and highly commended finalists have achieved, children and young people’s language and communication development, especially for those with SLCN, has been supported.

“Speech and language problems too often go under the radar, so everyone should not only be congratulated for their work but for bringing this important issue to the attention of others. I would like to say well done to all those shortlisted who have shown true grit and determination to better themselves and others. They are all a true inspiration - keep up the good work.”

Chris Hall, Director of Clinical Assessment at Pearson, says: “Congratulations to Holy Trinity CoE Academy for winning the Communication Commitment Award at the 2015 Shine a Light Awards for the remarkable success they have seen from introducing and engaging the whole school to champion the Communication Commitment. Each year the applications get stronger and more inspiring. We have seen examples of children and young people being supported by some truly inspiring individuals and schools like Holy Trinity.

“The Shine a Light Awards, now in their fourth year, continue to grow and we have been delighted to welcome an incredible judging panel who represent the very best of the education and SEN sector. To once again partner with the Communication Trust and celebrate these inspiring people and organisations is a real privilege.”

Anne Fox, Director of The Communication Trust, says: “Congratulations to the winners and highly commended finalists whose work will help inspire and motivate people right across the country. Holy Trinity Academy is a wonderful example of this inspiration in practice and they have shown what can be achieved with commitment and dedication.

“We’re delighted to have this partnership with Pearson, which allows Shine a Light to be a true celebration of the amazing work up and down the country and for helping the Trust to reach more children and young people and the professionals who work with them. We’re particularly pleased this year to be able to acknowledge our Communication Commitment schools who have taken a whole-school approach to improving children’s outcomes in speech, language and communication through a new award category. The range of activities they’ve completed is fantastic with great results.

“The Shine a Light Awards are a key fixture for the speech and language sector as they reflect a range of best practice and innovative work taking place across the country. At a time when early years, health, education and SEN services are going through significant reforms, Shine a Light focuses attention on what can be achieved through expertise, sheer determination and never giving up on children and young people’s potential.”

The Shine A Light awards are designed to honour individuals, teams, campaigns, communication-friendly settings and communities that have excelled in their support of children and young people’s communication, particularly for those with SLCN.
