

Press Release – IMMEDIATE RELEASE

OUTSTANDING SEVEN-YEAR-OLD FROM YORKSHIRE HONOURED AT SHINE A LIGHT AWARDS FOR HER COMMITMENT TO DEVELOPING LOCAL CHILDREN’S COMMUNICATION SKILLS

Eight-year-old Charlotte Seth from Skipton, Yorkshire, has been highly commended in the Young Person of the Year category at an awards ceremony in London for her dedication and commitment to developing not only her own communication skills but that of other local children. The 2017 Shine a Light Awards, run by Pearson in partnership with The Communication Trust, took place on 23rd March 2017 and were hosted by singer and theatre star Gareth Gates.

The 2017 Shine a Light Awards is a national awards scheme that celebrates innovative work and excellent practice in supporting children and young people’s communication development.

Charlotte has Joubert Syndrome, a rare disorder affecting the brain, causing varying degrees of physical, mental impairments and a visual impairment. She uses a wheelchair and speaks through a high-tech Augmentative and Alternative Communication (AAC) aid with a little sign language, vocalisations and non-verbal communication.

Her dedication to improving her own communication abilities has led her to become a keynote speaker at three regional conferences in the past year. She has given presentations on the subjects of total communication, what people can do to support communication for AAC users and her experiences with using AAC in the community.

Charlotte is now teaching others how to support AAC users and acts as a positive role model of what can be achieved, despite significant physical and sensory disabilities. This is already impacting on other young people – she has inspired a teenage boy to speak at a conference using his AAC, when previously he rarely spoke in public.

In addition to all of this, in the past year Charlotte has set up a business - Charlotte's Lovely Things - making fused glass artworks. She makes both her own creations and works to commissions, selling at craft fairs and manning her stall herself!

Charlotte said: “I feel excited and happy.”

Gareth Gates, host of the 2016/17 Shine a Light Awards, said: “Charlotte is an amazing young person. Being able to communicate with confidence is often taken for granted but for many it is an everyday struggle. I have found my stutter crippling at times but I have learnt ways to manage my difficulties with the support of others. What Charlotte has achieved at the age of just seven is so inspiring.

“It is heart-warming to know that not only are other children and young people across England getting the support they need to develop and achieve goals, but the young people themselves are taking the time to help others. Charlotte should be extremely proud of her award.”

Chris Hall, Director of Clinical Assessment at Pearson, said: “Congratulations to Charlotte for being highly commended in the Young Person of the Year Award category. We were struck by what she has managed to achieve at her young age. Her reach goes beyond just supporting her peers - she’s taking the time to liaise with young adults, professionals, carers and parents. She is extremely innovative and creative and is simply a fantastic role model to others.”

“This is the fifth year we have run the Awards and we remain blown away by the standard of applications. They give an amazing insight into the unsung work that is taking place across the country to improve the speech, language and communication skills of children and young people.”

Octavia Holland, Director of The Communication Trust, said: “Congratulations to Charlotte and everyone who triumphed at the Shine a Light Awards. They have shown what can be achieved when expertise, enthusiasm and dedication is given to children and young people who struggle to communicate. These Awards highlight the very best practice that is taking place in settings across the country. We would like to say a huge thank you to Pearson for their long-standing support.”
