OUTSTANDING MANCHESTER YOUTH JUSTICE SERVICE HONOURED AT SHINE A LIGHT AWARDS FOR ITS COMMITMENT TO DEVELOPING THE COMMUNICATION SKILLS OF YOUNG SERVICE USERS

The Manchester Youth Justice Service has won the Youth Justice Award at an awards ceremony in London for its continued commitment to developing its young service users' communication skills. The 2018 Shine a Light Awards, run by learning company Pearson in partnership with The Communication Trust, took place on 22nd March 2018 and were hosted by stand-up comedian, actor and TV writer, Adam Hess.

The 2018 Shine a Light Awards is a national awards scheme that celebrates innovative work and excellent practice in supporting children and young people's communication development. There were 10 awards in total, with winners and highly-commended finalists chosen by a panel of experts from the sector.

Manchester Youth Justice is a government-funded organisation that gives reading and linguistic help to young people referred for its services, as well as providing assessments and court reports. Its team of trained staff includes speech and language therapists (SLTs), and aims to identify and support all young people who have special educational needs and disabilities (SEND), offering assistance in the form of programmes such as That Reading Thing (TRT) and drama therapy. Manchester Youth Justice also gives advice to practitioners on how to communicate with young people.

Working in close partnership with an education psychologist, the service has good links with the Statutory Education Department, Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAMHS), and the British Dyslexia Association. Together they help ensure the needs of young service users are properly met.

Elsewhere in the local community, Manchester Youth Justice has forged a close relationship with Manchester College. As partners they support young people over the age of 16 to access adult provisions suited to their needs, providing specialist courses including those designed for students who find it difficult to engage in education.

Marie McLaughlin, Head of Service at Manchester Youth Justice, said: "I am obviously thrilled to see our hard work with partners recognised in this way. We have always known that the children we work with have poor communication skills that have been huge barriers at every stage of their young lives.

"Together with education and health colleagues, we are now making significant inroads into addressing this so that those barriers can be removed."

Stand-up comedian and actor, Adam Hess, host of the 2018 Shine a Light Awards, said: “The dedication of the Manchester Youth Justice team is outstanding. As a child, I struggled greatly with dyslexia and an immense fear of public speaking, if it wasn’t for the support I received when I was younger I wouldn’t be in the position I am today.

“It is fantastic to know that other children and young people are being given the support they need to thrive and achieve their goals. Manchester Youth Justice should be very proud of its award.”

Sharon Hague, Senior Vice President at Pearson, says: “Our warmest congratulations to Manchester Youth Justice. Through our innovative clinical assessments, Pearson is committed to supporting those working to help people overcome challenges in speech and language. For six years we have run these awards as we believe it is so important to recognise and celebrate the incredible, but often unsung, work being done across the country to change the lives of children and young people by helping them to develop their communications skills.”

Octavia Holland, Director of The Communication Trust, said: “Congratulations to Manchester Youth Justice and everyone who triumphed at the 2018 Shine a Light Awards. They have shown what can be achieved when expertise, enthusiasm and dedication is given to children and young people who struggle to communicate. These awards highlight the very best practice that is taking place in settings across the country.”

The Shine a Light Awards have grown in popularity since their launch during the National Year of Communication in 2011 (known as the Hello campaign). To date, the awards have celebrated the work of over 120 teams and a wide range of individuals, including young people with severe and complex speech, language and communication needs (SLCN).
