LONDON SOUTH EAST COLLEGES WINS NATIONAL ACCOLADE FOR CHANGING THE LIVES OF CHILDREN AND YOUNG PEOPLE WITH SPEECH, LANGUAGE AND COMMUNICATION DIFFICULTIES

Winners of the seventh annual Shine a Light Awards revealed by British comic actress and writer, Sally Phillips with special performance from Britain’s Got Talent winner, Lee Ridley (Lost Voice Guy)

London South East Colleges, which dedicates time and resources to developing their students’ communication skills, has won Secondary School/College of the Year Award at the UK-wide 2019 Shine a Light 2019 Awards organised by learning company Pearson, in partnership with The Communication Trust.

The Shine a Light Awards, which took place at Pearson’s headquarters in London, celebrate innovative work and excellent practice in supporting children and young people’s speech, language and communication development. They also recognise the hard work and determination of children and young people who have some form of long-term and persistent speech, language and communication needs (SLCN).

The awards were hosted by British comic actress and writer, Sally Phillips, whose eldest son, Olly, was born with Down’s Syndrome and was the inspiration for her acclaimed documentary A World Without Down’s Syndrome?

London South East Colleges was put in the spotlight for their fantastic provision for young people with special educational needs and disabilities (SEND). Their philosophy of ‘Fly the Nest’, results in the college’s dedication to support all their students to be prepared for adulthood, focusing on the development of their functional communication abilities, everyday living skills and word readiness.

From as early as receiving a students’ application form, college staff are planning the best way forward for each individual. Liaising with feeder school teachers, therapists and family members, staff use objects, photos, symbols and easy to read information during interview and taster days to understand their interests and aspirations.

Once in the classroom, college staff members ensure that they have access to a diverse curriculum and a wide range of communication tools and take the time to create opportunities to help develop their expressive language and functional communication skills with students finding themselves working in the college shop or serving fellow students in the café. Those with artistic flair can even devise and deliver their own drama productions through the college’s Greengoose Performing Arts Programme.

London South East Colleges' amazing dedication to supporting their students' communication goes even further, providing a multi-disciplinary service comprising of Speech and Language Therapy, Occupational Therapy and Physiotherapy with all teaching and support staff receiving dedicated SLCN training.

The college's hard work and determination has resulted in their students not only achieving fantastic academic results but also accessing highly successful work placements with over 50% of those on the supported internship programme going into employments, against a London average of just 6%!

In total, 11 winners across 12 categories were recognised for their incredible contributions across the UK with one also receiving the Pearson Outstanding Achievement of the Year Award. In addition, ten finalists received Highly Commended accolades.

Sally Phillips, Host of the 2019 Shine a Light Awards, said: "London South East Colleges provides fantastic communication provision for their students. As a nation, it is vital that we ensure that all children have the opportunity to express themselves, particularly when this ability has a profound impact on our future life chances.

"The amazing winners and highly commended finalists of the Shine a Light Awards prove what a difference we can make if we become informed, impassioned and engaged in the speech language and communication needs of those around us. London South East College isn't just changing the lives of the students in their community but also across the UK. I have seen for myself the huge difference expert intervention and support provides for children, like my son, Olly, particularly at a time where we face a nationwide shortage of speech and language therapists."

Sally was joined by Britain's Got Talent Winner, Lee Ridley (known as Lost Voice Guy) who performed at the ceremony. Lee has cerebral palsy and uses AAC, via voice software on his iPad, to communicate and express himself.

Lee Ridley (known as Lost Voice Guy), who performed at the 2019 Shine a Light Awards, said: "I may not be able to speak but I most certainly have a voice. I know first-hand that with support, determination and a sense of humour you can achieve what others may think is impossible.

"I was thrilled to perform at the 2019 Shine a Light Awards and to meet inspirational schools, colleges and teams like South East London College. We take for granted in this country our ability to talk and express ourselves but for many it's not easy. With different strategies, technology and support available, children and young people can realise their dreams. It is heart-warming to know there are so many teams and individuals across the country that are dedicated to ensuring children and young people's voices are heard. I am thrilled London South East College was recognised at the awards."

Robert Reilly-Craig, Head of Clinical Assessment at Pearson, said: "Congratulations to London South East College for their well-deserved award. We are proud that the Shine a Light Awards have become a key event in the speech, language and communication communities' calendar. Pearson has supported these Awards for seven years to ensure that recognition and accolade is given to a sector that does not enjoy the same public recognition as other issues, such as literacy or numeracy.

"It is critical that we understand the challenges faced by those who have speech, language and communication needs, as well as the solutions that can help them. These Awards enable us to showcase best practice and inspire others to improve their practice."

Maxine Burns, Speech and Language Advisor at The Communication Trust, a coalition of over 50 organisations dedicated to supporting children and young people's speech, language and communication, said: "Well done to London South East College for all their hard work and dedication to improving young people's communication skills. We partner with Pearson annually on these awards to ensure there is a powerful platform available that can showcase best practice and innovative work in the field of speech, language and communication.

"This fundamentally matters as the Bercow Ten Years On review on the state of provision for children's SLCN in England showed that we still need to tackle poor understanding of SLCN and insufficient resourcing impacting children and young people's educational outcomes."

One in 10 children and young people in the UK have a long-term speech, language and communication need (SLCN). This can impact on their academic progress, social skills and future job prospects however with the correct support, children and young people can flourish.
